1. INTRODUCTION

Vocational Education Programme (VEP) at 10+2 level, a distinct stream intended to prepare students for a variety of occupations and enterprises spanning several areas of world of work is in operation for more than two decades.

The relevance of vocational education has increased in the growing Indian economy, especially in the light of the Government's thrust on Universalisation of Secondary Education, Skill Development and Social Justice. The Government of India has constituted the National Council on Skill Development (NCSO) to guide activities for skill development in the country. The Council is at the apex of a three-tier structure and would be concerned with vision setting and laying down core strategies for skill development. The apex body will be chaired by the Prime Minister and would consist of Ministers of Human Resource Development, Finance, Heavy Industry and Public Enterprises, Rural Development, Housing and Urban Poverty Alleviation, Labour and Employment and Deputy Chairperson of the Planning Commission and Chairperson of National Manufacturing Competitiveness Council.

The Eleventh Plan takes a number of measures, which will bring about a paradigm change in our Vocational Education System. The initiatives involving both the States and the Centre, often with private partnership will lead to the establishment of a credible, trustworthy and reliable training, testing and certification structure linked to global standards and responsive to the needs of the ultimate consumers of skills^(*).

Recognition of excellence in performance serves as a trigger to any endeavour. Hence, awards are given to recognize the good performance and substantial contributions of Individuals and Institutions in a field. They not only fulfill a vital need of personal satisfaction and sense of achievement but also serve as a source of inspiration to work professionally for the betterment of the society and the Nation. An award motivates a person or an Institution to move forward and it also inculcates unenviable position of competing with self and others. It serves as an instrument for sending signals that the efforts put in the right direction lead to significant contributions and rewards.
